Course Description

This course examines the development of the American system of higher education, including its origins, major trends, and distinctive features, in order to understand the purpose of higher education in the United States. Using a critical race lens, it surveys the social, historical, and political forces that have shaped colleges and universities from the colonial period through the present time, highlighting how these forces have stratified the system while creating inequities for racialized and other marginalized communities. The course is for students interested in careers as practitioners in postsecondary institutions and for those who want to conduct research on issues within higher education. It will help students understand higher education in the United States in the 21st century. Throughout the course we will remain open to various interpretations of history and policies while asking critical questions about who has been traditionally included and simultaneously excluded from participation.

Course Goals

- To provide students with a solid foundation for speaking and writing about social, historical, and political issues within higher education
- To provide students with a base for working as higher education practitioners or scholars
- To encourage students to think critically about empirical research and scholarly work
- To help students understand the connection between contemporary issues and historical events in higher education
- To expose students to the perspectives and voices of racially oppressed groups

Course Learning Outcomes

- To understand the development of the American higher education system
- To have knowledge of broad social and political forces that have acted upon higher education, including major events, wars, legislation, and court cases
- To understand how the history of higher education shapes 21st century institutions
- To discover who has been historically included and excluded from higher education
- To become a critical scholar or practitioner of higher education
- To develop a philosophy on higher education that will guide practical and scholarly work

Course Grades

All written assignments will be assessed based on the criteria set forth in the grading rubric in CourseWeb. All students should consult the grading rubric as they develop their assignments to assure that they are meeting the minimum requirements. Final grades for this class will come from the summation of grades for individual assignments as indicated by the following grading scale.

Grade	Points	General Evaluation
A+	290-300	Quality of work is outstanding; exceeds expectations
A	280-289	Quality of work is above average; exceeds expectations
A-	270-279	Quality of work is satisfactory; above expectations
B+	260-269	Quality of work is satisfactory; meets expectations
B	250-259	Quality of work is average; meets expectations
B-	240-249	Quality of work is acceptable; meets limited expectations
C+	230-239	Quality of work is acceptable; below expectations
C	220-229	Quality of work is below acceptable; below expectations
C-	219 or less	Work does not meet minimum requirements for course

COURSE POLICIES

Attendance/Absence/Tardiness Policy:

Each student is permitted two excused absences without academic penalty. An excused absence is defined as being sick, caring for a sick family member, participating in a professional development opportunity, attending a work-related function, or attending a funeral. Requests for excused absences must be submitted online prior to the scheduled class period. The link for requesting absences can be accessed on CourseWeb. Missing class for reasons other than those listed, acquiring more than two excused absences, or missing class without prior approval will result in a lower course grade. Persistent tardiness, without prior approval, will also result in a lower course grade.

Religious Observances:

Students are permitted to miss class, without academic penalty, in order to observe religious holidays not formally recognized by the University. Absences for religious observance will not count towards permissible excused absences. Requests must be submitted online prior to the scheduled class period. The link for requesting absences can be accessed on CourseWeb.

Deadlines:

All assignments are due on the date assigned. Late assignments will not be accepted unless prior arrangements have been made with the instructor. Written assignments must be submitted by 4:30pm on the due date. All written assignments must be uploaded to CourseWeb. Please note, failure to submit via CourseWeb will result in a lower grade for the assignment. Assignments will not be accepted via email or hard copy!!

Written Assignments:

All written assignments must use Times New Roman 12-point font and have a 1" margin throughout. Papers are to be of professional quality and free of spelling, grammatical, and typographical errors. Assignments must follow the format guidelines in the 6th edition of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (APA). This includes the grammatical and usage rules suggested by the APA. If you need assistance with APA, please do not hesitate to ask the instructor or TA.

All written assignments must use scholarly sources, which are defined primarily as empirical articles (those that are found in peer-reviewed journals and are research-based) and scholarly books (those written by notable scholars in their discipline). Newspapers, magazines, blogs, online posts, and social media should be used minimally.

Academic and Research Integrity:

Graduate students at the University of Pittsburgh have the responsibility to conduct themselves in an honest and ethical manner while pursuing their studies. Consequently, it is important that applicable University policies and regulations are followed in order to ensure open communication among faculty and students as well as fair and equitable treatment. Relevant information, including hearing and appeals procedures, can be accessed online at <http://www.pitt.edu/~graduate>

Disability Accommodations:

If you have a disability for which you are or may be requesting an accommodation, you are encouraged to contact both the professor and Disability Resources and Services (DRS) located at 140 William Pitt Union, (412) 648-7890, drsrecep@pitt.edu, (412) 228-5347 for P3 ALS users, as early as possible in the term. DRS will verify your disability. Consider discussing reasonable accommodations for this course with instructor.

Sexual Misconduct, Required Reporting, Support Services, & Title IX:

The University is committed to combatting sexual misconduct. You should know that University faculty and staff members are required to report any instances of sexual misconduct, including harassment and sexual violence, to the University's Title IX office so that the victim may receive appropriate resources and support. There are two important exceptions to this requirement about which you should be aware: (1) Some counselors and medical professionals do not have this reporting responsibility and can maintain confidentiality. A list of these professionals can be found here: <http://www.titleix.pitt.edu/report/confidentiality> (2) Disclosures about sexual misconduct that are shared as part of an academic project, classroom discussion, or course assignment, are not required to be disclosed to the University's Title IX office.

If you are the victim of sexual misconduct, the University encourages you to reach out to these resources:

- Title IX Office: 412-648-7860
- SHARE @ the University Counseling Center: 412-648-7930 (8:30 A.M. TO 5 P.M. M-F) and 412-648-7856 (AFTER BUSINESS HOURS)
- University of Pittsburgh Police: 412-624-2121.
- Other reporting information is available here: <http://www.titleix.pitt.edu/report-0>

Discrimination Based on Race, Gender, or Other Protected Identities:

The University is committed to creating a learning environment that is inclusive of all races, genders, socioeconomic statuses, religions, sexual orientations, nationalities, and languages. In particular, the professor is committed to including the voices of minoritized groups in this class, including those of people of color, women, transgender people, LGBTQIA+ people, no-Christian people, non-US citizens, and those who speak multiple languages. If you feel uncomfortable as a result of your minoritized identities and background, you are encouraged to talk to the professor. If you do not feel comfortable talking to the professor, you can contact the Office of Diversity & Inclusion <http://www.diversity.pitt.edu/>

Cases of discrimination and harassment based on protected identities should be reported to the Title IX office <http://www.titleix.pitt.edu/report/report-incident>

Technology:

Cell phones should be silenced and put away during class, unless we are using them for an in-class activity. Students should refrain from texting, emailing, and checking voicemail during class (exception will be made for residence life staff on duty). Laptops are permissible in class for taking notes, accessing CourseWeb, and retrieving relevant information for class. In general, please respect the learning environment of others.

COURSE ASSIGNMENTS

Class Participation (60 points)

Due: Weekly

Preparing for Class: Students are expected to complete all assigned readings prior to class and participate in discussion. As a graduate level course, students should think critically, participate actively, and engage willingly in order to enhance their own learning as well as the learning of others. In order to prepare for weekly class discussions, ALL students should: (a) complete the assigned readings, (b) take notes on readings, (c) determine the main themes/topics within the readings, (d) develop questions/comments for class.

Executive Summaries: Each week, one group (A, B, C, D) (groups determined by professor) will be responsible for developing executive summaries for the weekly readings. Every student in the group is required to post the following to CourseWeb: (1) one-page, single-spaced executive summary that includes two main themes/topics for the week. The executive summaries should include bullet points under each theme, rather than full sentences. Proper APA citations are not required.

Discussion Questions: In addition to the executive summaries, all group members must develop and answer one discussion question based on the readings assigned for the week. Every student in the group is required to post the following to CourseWeb: (1) one-page, single-spaced discussion question and answer. The discussion question should draw from multiple readings and should be thought provoking. The answer should answer the question and draw from multiple readings. Proper APA citations REQUIRED.

Each student in the designated discussion group is responsible for posting their own one-page executive summary and one-page discussion question to CourseWeb by Sundays at noon. All students in the course should access summaries and discussion questions and review prior to class and be prepared to discuss them.

Historical Issue (60 points)

Due: September 30th

One of the main purposes of this course is to help students realize that most contemporary issues in higher education are influenced by the sociohistorical and political context of the past 400 years. The issue paper will allow students to examine a current problem or trend in higher education and track it through history. This should allow students to focus on their own interests in hopes of informing future studies or their professional work. The issue paper should be 6 pages, double-spaced (not including references), should be grounded in theory and research, and should make proper reference to appropriate course readings and additional scholarship (at least 6 scholarly citations are required).

It is important to note that issues are not one-sided; they emerge from various perspectives and concern various stakeholders who have divergent values and goals, making them difficult to resolve.

In the paper, students are expected to address the following questions (hint: you may use these questions to develop sub-headings in the paper, per APA):

1. What is the history of the issue? (When did it first arise and how has it evolved?)
2. What are the current perspectives on the issue? (Consider divergent perspectives; who thinks it is an issue? Who doesn't think it is an issue?)
3. Who are the various stakeholders concerned with the issue? (e.g., students, parents, policy makers, all people living in the United States)
4. How might the issue be resolved? (e.g., policies, programs, etc.)

Example issues:

- Inequitable access to higher education for certain groups (e.g., Native American students, students with disabilities)
- Inequitable retention and graduation rates for certain groups (e.g., Latinx students, Black students, Veteran students)
- Campus climate issues for certain groups (queer students, students of color, women)
- Sexual assault on campus
- Tuition increases
- Student debt crisis
- Lack of diversity on college campuses
- Student hazing (e.g., Greek organizations, Band)
- Hiring of contingent faculty
- Attack on academic freedom
- Hate speech on college campus
- Racists incidents on college campuses
- Homelessness & hunger for college students
- Payment for student athletes
- In-state tuition for undocumented students
- Low transfer rates from community college to 4-year institution

Re-envisioning Policy (60 points)

Due: October 28th

All policies are biased and influenced by the personal perspectives and experiences of those who write them. Students are expected to think critically about the historical policies that have shaped the emergence of the system of higher education. This paper will allow students to explore one policy in order to better understand its history and stated purpose. Rather than accepting the chosen policy at face value, students are expected to uncover the unconscious biases within the policy. Students should think like Takaki and provide a critical perspective of the policy, talking specifically about who the policy has historically helped and who it has harmed and or excluded (i.e., people of color, women, gay and lesbian people, trans* people, people with disabilities, etc.). Students must pick one significant piece of legislation, policy, or court case that that has had an impact on higher education and analyze it from a critical perspective. The paper should be grounded in theory and research and should make proper reference to appropriate course readings and additional scholarship (at least 6 scholarly citations are required). The paper should be 6 pages, double-spaced (not including references) and should address the following questions (hint: you may use these questions to develop sub-headings in the paper, per APA):

1. Describe the legislation, policy, or court case.
2. Why/how is the legislation, policy, or court case significant to the history of U.S. higher education?
3. Who has the policy included and/or helped?
4. Who has the policy excluded and/or harmed?

Philosophy of Higher Education (60 points)

Due: December 2nd

The purpose of this paper is to articulate a personal philosophy of higher education. Ultimately, we all have a philosophy of higher education, but many of us have never articulated it. As higher education scholars and/or practitioners, it is critical that we are aware of the perceptions and beliefs that guide our work. At the same time, this course is designed to challenge and expand students' foundational beliefs about higher education. Students will compose an 8 page, double-spaced paper (not including references) that articulates their philosophy of higher education. This assignment is based on the essential questions that we will discuss and reflect on throughout this course (listed below). Students must properly address ALL the questions in their paper. Although the statement may be written in first person, it should also be grounded in theory and research and should make proper reference to appropriate course readings and additional scholarship as needed to express a thorough philosophy (at least 10 scholarly citations are required). The final statement should demonstrate a reflective analysis of course literature and materials related to a personal philosophy of higher education and should develop a supported argument for the answers to the essential questions.

Essential Questions (hint: you may use these questions to develop sub-headings in the paper, per APA):

1. What is the purpose of higher education?
2. Who should attend colleges and universities?
3. What should be taught?
4. Who should teach?
5. Who should pay?
6. How should higher education be structured and governed?
7. What is the role of state/federal government?
8. What is higher education's responsibility to society?

In order to help students to develop their thoughts and improve upon their writing, they will submit a working draft of the paper to an assigned peer in the class by November 18th. Peer reviewers must provide feedback (using the grading rubric as a guide) by November 24th. The final submission should incorporate the feedback as necessary.

Policy Presentation (60 points)

Due: Varies

Each week, 1-2 students will provide an oral presentation on a policy, legislation, court case, or advocacy group/association that influences higher education. Each group of 1-2 students will pick one of the following topics to present on. Students can choose their own teams and topics, but must sign up the first day of class. Prior to the presentation, students shall conduct research in order to become experts on the topic. The presentation should cover the following:

1. Description of the policy, legislation, court case, or advocacy group/association
 2. What are the most important aspects of the topic as it pertains to higher education?
 3. What is the overall impact of the policy on higher education?
 4. Who has the policy included/helped?
 5. Who has the policy excluded/harmed?
 6. What perspectives on the policy have not been covered within the course materials?
- Presentations should be 10 minutes & should include at least one video or audio clip
 - Presenters must also provide a 1-page handout with a summary of the main points covered in the presentation (upload to CW)
 - Presentations should also include 10 minutes of guided discussion
